Article 1Have We Taken Security Too Far?

What's the difference between a medical student and a convict? The answer: A convict doesn't pay $50,000 a year for the privilege of being fingerprinted and patted down. I am referring, of course, to the increasingly stringent security measures that have come to characterize modern educational testing. As student evaluation techniques have migrated from face-to-face assessment to computer-based exams administered in dedicated testing centers, evaluators have become less and less likely to know examinees, leading to heightened precautions around exam security.

I recently interviewed a group of fourth-year medical students who had just taken Step 2 of the United States Medical Licensing Clinical Knowledge Examination at test-administration centers. Each of the students had paid $560 for the privilege, and had devoted nine hours to the single-day exam, which consists of eight sections of 40 to 45 questions each. Over the day, they received a total break time of 45 minutes. Students must pass the exam to obtain a medical license, and scoring well is an important factor in gaining admission to competitive medical specialties. So anxiety tends to run high.

This inevitable anxiety is compounded by high-security measures. IDs are checked. Each student wears a unique number on his or her shoulder throughout the day. Students are fingerprinted each time they enter and exit the testing room (up to 16 times). They are patted down and asked to roll up their pants legs and pull their pockets inside-out. If they wear a jacket or sweater into the exam room, they cannot take it off. They are warned that they will be under constant camera surveillance.

One of the students, a former U.S. marine, said he had found the entire atmosphere of the exam eerily familiar. He had served in Iraq, helping to preside over the return of inhabitants to Fallujah after the city's recapture by U.S. forces. "It was weird," he said. "They were using many of the exact same procedures and equipment we used in Fallujah. It took so long for them to verify identities that you almost didn't dare leave the room, for fear you couldn't get back in time. I finally had to show one of the examiners how to do it properly." Of course, these techniques are not merely for medical students. Aspiring accountants and architects, students sitting for the GRE, and prospective employees.

Some might say that such medieval approach to testing students is not only necessary but laudable. In the case of medical testing, the health of the nation is a vital resource, and we cannot afford to place it in the hands of physicians who might have succeeded through academic dishonesty. Who would want a loved one to be cared for by a physician who had cheated on the medical-licensing exam? As public policy, exam hawks argue, we should demand the very highest security in all such testing.

But perhaps we have gone overboard. After all, the core of the patient-physician relationship is trust. The Hippocratic Oath, which has shaped the ethics of medicine for many centuries, enjoins the physician to respect patients' privacy and dignity and to always put each patient's interests first. We entrust to our physicians all sorts of matters we would not share with anyone else — private details of our health and personal relationships, access to intimate parts of our bodies, sometimes even our lives. We want to trust our physicians. No one is arguing that security is unnecessary, but perhaps we haven't quite yet found the sweet spot.

Article 2

The 9/11 Era is Over

Now, as COVID-19 has transformed the way that Americans live, and threatens to claim exponentially more lives than any terrorist has, it is time to finally end the chapter of our history that began on September 11, 2001. I say that as someone whose life was shaped by 9/11. I was a 24-year-old graduate student working on a city-council campaign when I watched the second plane curve into the World Trade Center and then saw the first tower collapse. Everything that I'd done in my life up to that point suddenly seemed trivial. I walked several miles to my apartment, as my fellow New Yorkers came out into the streets to be near one another (as we can't be today). In the days that followed, my Queens neighborhood was the setting for a number of funerals for firemen. I will never forget the image of one devastated widow sitting in a lawn chair in her front yard, receiving condolences from a line of the toughest — but most broken — men I had ever seen.

Scared and angry, I was roused by President George W. Bush's speech to a joint session of Congress a few days after 9/11, in which he confidently declared, "Our War on Terror begins with al-Qaeda, but it does not end there. It will not end until every terrorist group of global reach has been found, stopped, and defeated." He further defined the nature of the conflict by saying, "Americans are asking, 'Why do they hate us?' They hate what we see right here in this chamber — a democratically elected government." To have this unfathomable event framed in a way that fit neatly into the American narrative that I'd grown up with in the 1980s and '90s was reassuring. After a decade defined by the triviality of Bill Clinton's impeachment and the absence of a sense of mission, America had a new national purpose on par with the Cold War — another generational effort to make the world safe for democracy. I moved down to Washington, D.C., to be a part of that effort, in whatever way I could.

Hamilton was appointed vice chairman of the 9/11 Commission, so that compelled me to move to Washington. One of the tasks that Hamilton assigned me was to make up a report and carefully review all of Osama bin Laden's fatwas, and to examine al-Qaeda's broader motivations. After reading bin Laden's own words and studying the lives of the hijackers, I could no longer so easily square their motivations with what Bush had said after 9/11. The people who had attacked us didn't seem focused on their hatred of America's "democratically elected government." What they hated was American foreign policy. What they sought was the overthrow of their own governments — chiefly, that of Saudi Arabia, where bin Laden and 15 of the 19 hijackers came from, and that of Egypt, where the plot's ringleader, Mohamed Atta, came from.

I got a job as a speechwriter for former Representative Lee Hamilton, a prototypical Washington wise man who had served in Congress for 34 years and ran the Woodrow Wilson Center, a think tank that doubled as the nation's official memorial to our 28th president. Every day, I'd go to work in the Ronald Reagan Building, where a slab of the Berlin Wall reminded visitors of the arc of American triumph: from our origin as a superpower after Wilson's victory in World War I through the collapse of Soviet communism, which made America the world's only superpower — an epoch that still seemed to be in its early phase as our military toppled regimes in Afghanistan and Iraq.

As the 9/11 Commission and I continued working at our report, the Iraq War was unraveling into an unmitigated disaster. The dissolution of the Iraqi army and state punctured my faith in American competence. The horror of Abu Ghraib punctured my sense of America's moral authority. The obvious strategic victory for Iran punctured my confidence in the judgment of the national-security establishment. The reframing of the war as an effort to bring democracy to the Iraqi people punctured my trust in the words spoken by my leaders. The rhetoric that was once rousing now seemed cynical, a post facto justification for a catastrophic mistake. Democracy was being debased, not promoted.

I was angry, above all, at myself. I was a Democrat, but I had come to Washington to be part of the bipartisan response to 9/11 — one that was going to cast the terrorists, in Bush's words, into "history's unmarked grave of discarded lies," alongside "fascism, and Nazism, and totalitarianism." I had believed Colin Powell's presentation to the United Nations about Iraq's weapons of mass destruction. I had cheered the toppling of a statue of Saddam Hussein. I had ignored obvious signs of overreach — our government opening a gulag at Guantanamo Bay and torturing people who might have been innocent. I had bought into the idea that Democrats needed to demonstrate their willingness to vigorously prosecute the "global war on terrorism," even as it led us into war with a country that had nothing to do with the 9/11 attacks. I had been naive and wrong, swept along by my own post-9/11 emotions and the assurances of my own government. Every day is September 12.

Grading type: Absolute position

Grade details: 3 / 5 = 60%

Here are the scores for each item in this response:

1. 1 / 1 = 100%
2. 0 / 1 = 0%
3. 0 / 1 = 0%
4. 1 / 1 = 100%

Write your commentary on the article "The 9/11 Era is Over". Your commentary is to be between 180-200 words. You are not allowed to cite from the original text pieces longer than 4 words running. Your text should contain various points of view, including your own.

To fulfil the task successfully you are:

- to briefly convey the content of the article;
- to mention various/possible views of the issue;
- to divide your text into logically connected paragraphs.

The subject of this article is the tragedy of 9/11, its reasons and consequences. The author of the article believes it to be important in the time when lives of all Americans have been transformed by COVID19 to end "the chapter of our history", that shaped his own life. He was brought to action by the Bush's speech, in which "the war on terror" was declared, the nature of conflict was defined, and the goal of that war explained as to defeat all the terrorist groups in the world, and became a speechwriter. The official point of view was that the idea of the terrorists was to ruin the governmental system of the USA.

Making up a report for Hamilton, the author had to examine terrorists' motivation and discovered that the subject of their hatred may have been not the 'democratically elected government', but America's foreign policy. Moreover, as the situation in Iraq was developing into an unmitigated disaster, it punctured the author's faith to the authorities even more, so the President's rhetoric, that seemed so arousing before, became unconvincing. The author understood he had believed the presentation on the usage of weapons of mass destruction, welcomed the toppling of a statue and used to underestimate different signs of overreach and injustice in the actions carried out by the government, so he considers his previous behavior to be naive. Therefore, this part represents a point of view that is opposing to the one presented in the speech of George W. Bush.

Summing up everything mentioned above, the article represents two possible views on the subject it deals with. It seems that the author's evidence for the first view is an official speech, while the second one is based on his report.
